QUESTION 3

You are developing a Windows Store app to connect to a server and download files that are larger than 500 MB to the local file system.

You need to recommend a technology to download the files.

Which technology should you recommend? (More than one answer choice may achieve the goal. Select the BEST answer.)

- A. Background Transfer
- B. XML HTTP Request
- C. web Sockets
- D. HTTP Client

Correct Answer: A

To provide a consistent experience when downloading larger media (video and music) with an operational lifetime that may span beyond multiple app suspensions and/or changes in network availability, your app can use Background

Transfer.

Note:

You can now use XMLHttpRequest to upload or download objects that are larger than a few MB, such as Blob objects and FormData objects, which may take a long time to complete. Because apps can be terminated at any time, you should consider using the Windows Runtime background transfer APIs for these operations.
