QUESTION 5

A retailer has a simple fulfillment network with one internal distribution center (DC). The retailer would now like to introduce a new line of merchandise that will be shipped directly to the customer by a third party logistics (3PL) facility. How should the sourcing rules be set up to accommodate the new line of merchandise?

A. Since the third party logistics facility ships only the new line of merchandise, the 3PL ship node can be specified on the order lines containingthese items.

B. The sourcing rule should be set up so all items will be shipped from both the 3PL and the internal DC. The product will automatically chooseonly one ship node per order line.

C. Item classification-based sourcing rule can be defined so only items belonging to the new line get sourced from the 3PL while the other itemsget sourced from the internal DC.

D. The 3PL and internal DC should be assigned priorities so the cost to fulfill an internal item will be cheapest from the DC and the cost to fulfillthe new line of merchandise will be cheapest from the 3PL node.

Correct Answer: C
