QUESTION 5

Which of the following would be the MOST beneficial to determine whether a project has met the defined objectives?

- A. Schedule variance
- B. Cost variance
- C. Work breakdown structure
- D. Key performance indicators

Correct Answer: D

Key performance indicators (KPIs) are the most beneficial tools for assessing whether a project has met its defined objectives. KPIs are specific, measurable metrics that are aligned with the project's goals. They provide a clear and quantitative way to evaluate project performance and determine whether the project has achieved its intended outcomes. While schedule variance and cost variance are important measures, KPIs offer a more comprehensive view of the project's success in meeting its objectives.
